Acknowledgement

I would like to express my deep gratitude to all those without whose support and generosity this book would never have been possible:

First of all, I would like to thank my supervisor, Professor Martin Heusser, for his insights, patience and trust throughout the entire process of writing my PhD. His complete confidence in my work has helped me maintain the discipline and energy to finish this project. I am also obliged to my examiner, Professor Fritz Gutbrodt, for his constructive criticism of my dissertation. In addition, I am deeply indebted to Cornel Jacquemart, former Rektor of Kantonsschule Büelrain Winterthur, for allowing me to take a sabbatical in 2008 and in 2011, so that I was able to concentrate on my research and write most of my PhD. My thanks also go to Dieter Spielmann, whose comments on philosophy turned out to be a great source of inspiration. Moreover, I am most grateful to Antoinina Bevan Zlatar, Clara Boland, Jürg Gübeli, David Hefti, Delia Hochstrasser, Rahel Solenthaler, and Jennifer Sweeney for their stimulating remarks and invaluable advice on different versions or parts of this book.

My special thanks go to Frances Ilmberger and Barbara Bächli Haenni, who proof-read my manuscript and offered valuable assistance towards the end of the writing process, and to Kathrin Heyng from the Narr Francke Attempto Verlag, who encouraged me to consider publishing my PhD in a digital version. Her continued efforts and her precise instructions during the process of editing this book have been most appreciated. I am also much indebted to the Swiss National Science Foundation for their generous support of the digital version of this publication.

Furthermore, I should like to thank my sister, Nicole, who has helped me in more ways than I can enumerate. Most importantly, she believed in me whenever the faith in my own work was wavering. Finally, I am deeply grateful to my parents and close friends for their unstinting support and interest in my research. Without their continuous encouragement, I could not have finished this project.
